NOTES

INTRO	The diagrams illustrate the transformation of Porth Harbour from 2000 to the present.
OVERVIEW	Overall, significant changes have occurred to cater to tourism, while some areas have remained unchanged, maintaining accessibility for the general public.
DETAIL 1	On the northern shore, a new dock has been constructed to handle passenger ferries, increasing the capacity for tourist arrivals. The Marina has been relocated to the southern shore, which is closer to the hotel, replacing the previous fishing boat area. Meanwhile, the car parks on the western side continue to serve visitors arriving by car, while the large public beach in the northeast corner has been preserved for general use. These changes improved the accessibility for non-tourist-specific visitors.
DETAIL 2	The southern shore has also undergone considerable transformation. A disused castle has been converted into a modern hotel, and the public beach has been restricted to hotel guests as a private beach. Near the lifeboat station, the cafés and shops area has been built. Additionally, the showers and toilets area near the Marina has been expanded to improve convenience for visitors. These upgrades emphasize the development of the southern shore as a hub for luxury and recreation.
